Steamships and Hotels.

Perhaps we have already said enough about the above matters. No doubt many of our readers are tired of the constant iteration and reiteration of the same, or nearly the same arguments upon these subjects. The whole case may be summed up in a few words. The town needs them, is suffering for the want of them-is subjected to a constant loss by that want-is not able to avail herself of the facilities her railroad connections modation-is behind other towns with no higher claims than she has, and will be more so unless she bestirs her-

The English and Chinese.

Com. Tattnall, Flag Officer of the American Squadron in the Chinese Seas, has addressed a letter to th Secretary of the Navy, giving an account of the circumstances attending the repulse of the French and English by the Chinese at the mouth of the Pieho River. We should judge that the Americans succeeded no better than the others, nor, apparently, do treaties amount to anything with the Celestials. Beyond doubt, a heavy vengeance will be exacted; but one thing is evident, the Chinese are learning to fight, and the Northern tribes are different from the effeminate Cantonese.

The Fayetteville Observer says that it has shown from that most conclusive authority, the Tax List, that the sales of goods in Favetteville have increased instead of fallen off. Taking the tax list here as authority, then we think that our correspondent "Enterprise" was mistaken in his estimated falling off in the sales of promptly carried out. goods here, for in fact these sales appear to have increased, but not at all as they ought to have done. Another thing we are pleased to know, that the freighting business on both our railroads is largely increased, the additional revenue from that source more than making up for all drawbacks in any other direction; so that one of two things, or both perhaps, must be taken for granted-additional produce arriving, or additional amounts of goods forwarded by railroad.

But all that does not cover the matter. We must prepare ourselves to replace the products of the forest by others more permanent-we must seek and improve new avenues, or go behind, and therefore we agree with nearly all that " Enterprise " has said. Compared with the efforts put forth by Petersburg and Charleston our course has been one of supineness-our progress in availing ourselves of the new avenues for trade opened up by our Railroad connections has been so slow as to be only nominal, as compared with what they ought to to a point above these of last year. When conventions meet together to select candidates to be supported by any party for any particular office. it is natural to suppose that it is the strength of the nominating party that is to be represented and to control the action of the nominating convention, and not the strength of the party opposed to it. Thus, for instance, Arkansas, or Mississippi, or Alabama, that al ways vote Democratically, have not as much strength in electoral votes as Massachusetts, that never votes for a Democrat, and so on. But the strength of Massachusetts is, so far as a D. mocratic candidate is concerned. worse than weakness.

It is a conceded fact, that the greater portion of the electoral votes cast for the next Democratic candidate for the Presidency must come from the South. We say this without any wish to cast censure upon honest and faithful Democra's at the North, who stand up mantully. They are deserving of all praise and of all confidence, and we only wish there was more of them. But there is the difficulty. They are too few, and we cannot but think that some professing Democrats in the Northern States would do as well, at any rate they would act with better taste, if they exhibited a little more modesty. For instance, our pseudo Democratic managers at Albany, New York, Messrs. Dean Richmond, Cassiday. Cagger, and such like, to say nothing of other managers throughout the "Empire State," and in the "Empire City," those good people, who have so long feathered their own nests, and worked wires to control the Democratic party.
